

My Turn

What do Brad Parrett, Shara Cochenour, Gary Robinson, Mark Johnston, Bob Edwards, Ryan Holbrook, and Ed Ryan have in common, other than working either as a teacher, administrator or support staff at Pickaway-Ross?

What they have in common is that each has been featured in a newspaper, radio or television story about a project or program here since the beginning of December. That list of names grows even more if you look back at media attention we've received since the beginning of the school year.

Media Attention - A WBNS CH. 10 camera operator shoots video footage as students of Ed Ryan's Criminal Investigation and Police Science program undergo annual chemical training last fall.

This is important because we are being recognized for the efforts we make in our school or in our private lives.

That list gets even longer when you add the names of those who serve on our LAMPS Committee, or on outside boards and committees. For example, Carrie Fife is a member of the Area 20 Workforce Investment Board, Jeff Phillips serves on boards of both the Pickaway County Chamber of Commerce and the YMCA. Additionally, I am honored to serve on Governor's Executive Workforce Board.

I know we could add many more names to that list.

We get attention because we are active in our communities and because we do great work here. The positive attention we attract keeps Pickaway-Ross on the radar in our communities.

As a school of choice we need to continue these efforts so our value in the community continues to grow. Keep up the great work, everyone.
